

Common Concealed Carry Knife Locations

1. Waistband

Inside-the-waistband (IWB) carry is excellent for concealment. You can secure the knife inside your clothing using a smallclip sheath. That makes for automatic concealment that is nearly invisible, especially if your shirt or jacket hangs over the area.

3. Boot

Stashing your blade inside your boot has the bonus of making you feel like a superhero. Boot carry is one of the best options if your knife has a fixed blade. You can comfortably accommodate a bit more length and still effectively conceal it.

3. Pocket

Pocket carry is the most popular option for EDC enthusiasts. It's easy: just slip your knife into your pocket, and you're ready to go. Consider using a front pocket. Sitting down on your knife, even when it's safely closed, is no one's idea of comfort.

4. Belt

Some knives come with sheaths designed for belt carry. You can also purchase belt sheaths. That makes this a convenient option. However, your knife will be less concealed than with some other carry options. If you want your knife to be well-hidden, belt-carry may not be the right option.

5. Neck

You can wear a small knife around your neck using a paracord, chain, or purpose-made knife holder. Your knife will leave a bit of a lump under your shirt, so this method works better when you're wearing thicker, loose clothing and you aren't concerned about fool-proof concealment.
