

7 Knife Gifts for the Gear Guy This Christmas

1. Microtech Hera II Mini

The Hera II Mini packs Microtech's signature out-the-front (OTF) action into a compact frame built for daily pocket carry. The smaller footprint makes it an easy add to a pocket that already carries keys, a phone, and a wallet.

2. Pro-Tech Runt 5

The Pro-Tech Runt 5 proves that an automatic can still have personality. Pro-Tech offers it in enough colors and finishes, like bronze, sapphire blue, or Crimson Tiger Camo, to match his favorite sports team or military branch.

3. Chris Reeve Small Sebenza 31

The Small Sebenza 31 pairs a 3-inch CPM MagnaCut blade with a titanium handle, and Chris Reeve Knives builds every one in Boise, Idaho. Inlay options like Micarta, box elder, and bog oak let you dress it up into a gift worth passing down.

4. Spyderco Para Military 2

Spyderco calls the Para Military 2 its best-selling knife. Its 3.4-inch CPM S45VN blade opens with a round thumb hole, and the Compression Lock closes safely with one hand. If he's new to EDC, it's an easy place to start.

5. Microtech Utility Knife

The Microtech Utility Knife's 6-inch M390MK blade sits between a paring knife and a chef's knife. That's the sweet spot for trimming, slicing, and quick weeknight prep. It's the pick for the guy who wants one go-to knife for almost any small kitchen job.

6. Microtech 8-Inch Chef's Knife

This 8-inch chef's knife is built with the same attention to steel and edge retention that Microtech applies to its automatics. It handles the full range of prep work, and its M390MK steel holds an edge well, so he spends less time at the sharpener.

7. Microtech Santoku 4.2 Inch

The Santoku brings a more compact, controlled option to the kitchen knife block. Its shorter blade and flatter profile suit a guy who wants precision over reach. Pair it with the Chef's Knife, and he has a two-knife setup that covers nearly everything.
